Great British Menu Star Inspires Manor House School Pupils

Great British Menu star Emily Watkins visited Manor House School in Bookham to inspire the next generation of gourmet chefs and to talk about the career opportunities available to students choosing GCSE Food Science as an option.

Executive chef Emily – who worked with Heston Blumenthal – runs the award-winning Kingham Plough in Chipping Norton, Oxfordshire. It regularly features in the UK’s top 100 restaurants and top 50 gastropubs lists.

Three years ago Emily competed in TV’s Great British Menu and won through to the final banquet at St Paul’s Cathedral.

She visited the selective independent school to address Year 9 Food Technology pupils on the opportunities her industry offers and how to excel at a career in food and nutrition.

Manor House School’s Head of Food Science, Mrs Kay Tercan said: “Bringing a star chef like Emily to the school was a great way to inspire the girls.”

Manor House offers Food and Nutrition studies \(Food Preparation and Nutrition\) to GCSE level – leading to career opportunities as a microbiologist, laboratory technician, dietetic assistant, health psychologist, nutritionist, food writer and food law manager plus a wide range of roles in the hospitality industry.
